

I wouldn't sift through NASA's lies trying to find evidence of one thing or another- as soon as you build a case to either support or refute Steiner with what you find it will be shown to be fake-like the "Mars" pictures of Greenland.

While Steiner also referred to the earth as a globe, clairvoyantly he said the earth appeared more convex, like a lens. He said he could be wrong when it came to earthly intelligence that wasn't derived from clairvoyant research.

I'm looking for the quote that I was referencing, but here is essentially the same thing. I will update when I have the one I'm thinking about. Here he describes it like a drop of quicksilver - flat on the top

-From Steiners' Four Seasons and the Archangels

.....The effect is that if we were to look at the Earth from some other planet, it would appear to us as a great water-drop in the cosmos. There would be all sorts of prominences on it — the continents, which would be rather differently coloured — but as a whole it would appear to us as a great water-drop in the midst of the universe.

Let us now consider this from a cosmic standpoint. What is this great water-drop? It is something which takes its shape from its whole cosmic environment.

If one approaches the matter from a spiritual-scientific point of view, bringing Imagination and Inspiration to bear on it, one comes to know what this water-drop really is. It is nothing other than a gigantic drop of quicksilver; but the quicksilver is present in an extraordinarily rarefied condition.

Here we are concerned with something of which we can say, when we use it on a small scale — this is water. We can draw water from a river or a well and use it as water. Yes, it is water, but there is no water that consists solely of hydrogen and oxygen. It would be absurd for anyone to suppose that water consists of hydrogen and oxygen only. In the case of mineral waters and such-like, it is of course obvious that something else is present. But there is no water composed solely of hydrogen and oxygen: that is only a first approximation. All water, wherever it appears, is permeated with something else. Essentially, the whole water-mass of the Earth is quicksilver for the universe. Only the small quantities we use are water for us. For the universe, this water is not water, but quicksilver.

Hence we can say, first of all, that in so far as we are considering the hydrosphere in relation to water, we have to do with a drop of quicksilver in the cosmos. Embedded as it were in this drop of quicksilver, naturally, are metallic substances — in brief, all the earthly substances. They represent the solid mass of the Earth, and they tend to assume their own special forms. Thus in the structure as a whole we observe [the general spherical form of quick]silver. Ordinary metallic quicksilver, one might say, is only the symbol produced by nature for the general activity of quicksilver, leading quite definitely to a spherical form. Embedded in the whole sphere are the metallic crystals, with the manifold variety of their own distinctive forms. Hence we have before us this formation of warmth, water, air: its tendency, as I have said, is to assume a spherical form, with individual crystal forms within it (see Plate I).

On the Earth itself everything seeks to become spherical (dark red); in this upper region the sphere is continually impelled to flatten out into a plane (reddish). Naturally it will tend to resume its spherical shape, but up there the spherical is always inclined to flatten itself out. The upper influences would really like to break up the Earth, to disintegrate it, so that everything might become a flat surface, spread out there in the cosmos.

The flat earth movement in conjunction with Steiners' clairvoyant view point actually align.

The firmament and these other planets are perceived as interdimensional realities to the Seerer.

Steiner's not wrong, but this "science" of NASA and other so-called academic sources is nothing more than theories taken for fact which would confuse a spiritual researcher if he tried to reconcile them both.

- This statement is to say now what Steiner is saying about a flattened drop of quicksilver, which takes an oblate spheroid shape and NASA depicts are two different things. You will see Neal Degross Tyson point out that the earth is not a perfect ball (sphere) as is depicted in the so-called pictures of earth from space, but an Oblate Spheroid

- Link to “Is it “pear shaped?” like Neal Degraas Tyson says- maybe he means like the quicksilver above- an Oblate Spheroid? At any rate it isn’t the ball sphere we are told and would be flat on top.

I also happen to believe the sun and the moon are also flat (sun disk) as we have footage of things flying through the sun,
